Prince George's Community College President Announces Retirement

By COURTNEY L DAVIS
PGCC

LARGO, Md. (October 30, 2019)—Sidney Gibson, chair of Prince George's Community College (PGCC) Board of Trustees, announced today that President Charlene M. Dukes will retire on June 30, 2020. President Dukes became the institution's eighth and first female president on July 1, 2007.

"President Dukes is a talented educator and leader who is passionate about Prince George's Community College, the county, and the region. We are pleased that she has served this community as president for 13 years," said Gibson.

Over her tenure, Prince George's Community College and the community have benefited from the leadership of President Dukes. A partnership with Prince George's County Public Schools led to the development of the Academy for Health Sciences, the first middle college in the state of Maryland, a Teacher Academy, two P-Tech Schools, and the 3D Scholars Program with University of Maryland Global Campus. It also includes two Information Technology Early College Academies with the Chesapeake Math and Information Technology Charter School's north and south campuses. President Dukes co-chaired the task force for the development of the Prince George's County Promise Scholarship. The scholarship, adopted and funded by former County Executive Rushern L. Baker, III, supports students graduating from Prince George's County Public Schools.

A champion of teaching, learning, and student success, President Dukes guided the realignment of organizational structures and program offerings to create connections between and among the three key components of the 2019-2021 Strategic Plan: student success, regional impact, and organizational excellence. The College's work with the Ensuring Student Success Institute, the Association of American Colleges and Universities' Roadmap Project, Achieving the Dream, and the American Association of Community Colleges' Pathways Project heightened the need for a reimagining of the work and commitment to the nearly 40,000 students served annually at Prince George's Community College.

President Dukes led the enhancement of facilities on the 52-year-old Largo campus and many of the College's degree and extension sites. Newly constructed or significantly renovated facilities include Bladen Hall, the Center for Health Studies, three modular buildings, the Culinary Arts Center, Lanham Hall, and the Center for Performing Arts. Growing enrollment led to additional square footage at University Town Center and Laurel College Center. In spring 2020, new construction and renovation will commence on the largest and oldest classroom building, Marlboro Hall.

President Dukes served as vice president for Student Services at PGCC prior to becoming president, and her leadership and interest in educational excellence have involved her in a number of professional and community organizations. She holds membership in a variety of professional associations, including the American Association of Community Colleges, the American Council on Education, the Association of American Colleges and Universities, the Presidents' Roundtable, and the National Council on Black American Affairs.

In addition, she is a member of the board of directors of the Institute for Higher Education Policy, Campus Compact, the Biden Institute, the Prince George's County Chamber of Commerce, the Business Roundtable, and Hillside-Works Scholarship Connection. President Dukes is on the board of directors of the Greater Washington Community Foundation, the Meyer Foundation, and Venture Philanthropy Partners. From 2007 through 2015, she served on the Maryland State Board of Education and from 2012 through 2015, was president of the board. From 2002 through 2006, President Dukes served on the Appointed Board of Education of Prince George's County and chaired the Student Support, Student Appeals, and Personnel Committees.

Washingtonian magazine recognized President Dukes as one of the 100 most powerful women in the Washington metropolitan area in 2011, 2013, 2015, and 2017. She was inducted into the Maryland Women's Hall of Fame in 2013, and was awarded the Dr. Reginald Wilson Diversity Leadership Award by the American Council on Education in 2014. President Dukes will leave an everlasting legacy when she retires in June 2020.

The Prince George's Community College Board of Trustees will initiate a national search for the ninth president of the College.

Awards For Heroes

By KURT WOLFGANG
Maryland Crime Victims Resource Center

UPPER MARLBORO (October 28, 2019)—The Maryland Crime Victims' Resource Center, Inc. has selected three heroes for the first awards of the Oliver Smith, Jr. Medal for heroism. The awardees are:

Baltimore City Police Sergeant Bill Shiflett and his colleague, Officer Christopher Miller. On July 15, 2019, Shiflett and Miller placed themselves in harm's way in order to save hostages in downtown Baltimore. Sgt Shiflett was shot and gravely wounded but is still expected to recover fully and return to duty.

On September 25, 2019, University of Maryland Law Student John Keller, Jr. saw a man being viciously attacked. Without regard for his own safety, John came to the aid of the victim. John awakened in the hospital with serious injuries, but the victim credits John with his life. John's jaw was broken and foot crushed. Investigation of the incident is still underway.

Oliver Smith, Jr. was a police officer who lost his life during an armed robbery in 1997. The award is named for him to commemorate his work and sacrifice, and that of his family on behalf of crime victims. The award is given to those who exhibit courage and heroism on behalf of crime victims.

The medals will be presented by the family members of Oliver Smith, Jr. at an event commemorating the 25th anniversary of the Maryland Victim's Rights Constitutional Amendment. This constitutional amendment established rights for Maryland's victims of crime and demanded that the legal system treat crime victims with dignity, respect and compassion.

It passed in 1994, with 92% of voters approving. The event is November 14, 2019.

This function is intended to be a fun-filled and exciting night of celebration, support and commitment to the work of promoting crime victims' rights. Tickets can be purchased at eventbrite.com.

All proceeds of the event will benefit crime victims and ensure that they receive justice and are treated with dignity and compassion through comprehensive victims' rights and services.

Hogan-Rutherford Administration Sponsors Historically Black Colleges & Universities Conference

20 Maryland Executive Departments Highlight State Employment Opportunities

By SHAREESE CHURCHILL
Maryland Governor's Press Office

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (October 31, 2019)—The Hogan-Rutherford administration this week took part in the 12th Annual Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCU) Career Development Marketplace Conference. This annual three-day conference, held at the Baltimore Convention Center, hosted more than 500 college students and their families from 30 colleges and universities from across the country. Maryland schools with conference attendees include Bowie State University, Coppin State University, Morgan State University, and the University of Maryland Eastern Shore.

Since taking office, the Hogan-Rutherford administration has invested more than $1.15 billion in state funds toward Maryland's HBCUs. The state leverages its investment by offering graduating students opportunities in state service as a valuable and viable career path.

"Today's conference is an opportunity for the students to receive firsthand knowledge from state government professionals," said Lt. Governor Boyd Rutherford, who delivered the closing address at the conference. "Our administration is committed to educating citizens on the many employment opportunities the state has to offer."

The HBCU Career Development Marketplace is a national conference to inform and educate undergraduate students of HBCUs on how to achieve success in corporate America. The students are able to speak face-to-face with experienced HBCU alumni and representatives from corporations, organizations, and government agencies seeking to hire talented graduates.

HBCU students were provided with direct access to state agency recruiters to learn more about the state's workforce opportunities. Each attending agency sponsored a recruitment booth at the conference where students were able to interact with state leaders and learn the many diverse careers each agency has to offer.

State government representatives included cabinet secretaries and directors including Dr. James D. Fielder, Secretary, Maryland Higher Education Commission; Ellington E. Churchill, Jr., Secretary, General Services; and Ricky D. Smith, Executive Director/Chief Executive Officer, Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport and the Maryland Department of Transportation Maryland Aviation Administration (MDOT MAA).

The Department of General Services was the lead agency in coordinating the participation of 20 state agencies, including Aging, Agriculture, Commerce, Education, Energy Administration, Environmental Service, General Services, Governor's Coordinating Offices, Health, Higher Education, Housing and Community Development, Human Services, Information Technology, Juvenile Services, Labor, Natural Resources, Planning, Public Safety and Correctional Services, State Police, and Transportation.

"General Services has been diligently working with other state agencies to provide as many resources as possible for these bright young students," said Secretary Churchill. "Our goal is to help students connect to state leaders and provide them with the valuable information they need to successfully and effectively begin their careers."

As a part of the state's participation in the conference, the state hosted a full day of conversations including a panel addressing Maryland careers in cyber security which have a critical role in driving Maryland's growth in key Maryland indus-

Annual Gingerbread House Contest and Show coming up at Darnall's Chance

If you place 1st, you'll win $100! If your entry is selected the best in viewer voting, it'll win you $275. Prizes are also presented for other winners in the adult, child and family categories.

For 20 years now, Darnall's Chance House Museum in Upper Marlboro has been hosting this delightful Gingerbread House contest. Anyone can enter—you just have to register (and pay the $5 fee). The house doesn't have to be a house—it could be a yacht or a barn or a jetliner or a teepee or a castle or a bakery. It just has to be original.

Participants must register for the competition by Friday, Nov. 8; fee is $5. Entry forms can be obtained by calling Darnall's Chance, 301-952-8010, or visiting history.pgparcs.com, clicking Darnall's Chance House Museum and then clicking on Gingerbread House Contest & Show.

Any structure, real or imaginary, is eligible for entry. Entry must be original—no gingerbread kits allowed. And there are other rules—ask for a list. Completed entries must be delivered on Sunday, Nov. 24, between the hours of 12 noon and 3 p.m.

And there's more

Even if you don't participate, you'll want to attend the show, which runs Nov. 29 to Dec. 15. I always go and I am fascinated by how clever some of the entries are. It feels like Christmas, just being there.

Darnall's Chance is one of the oldest houses in Prince George's County, built about 1742. It's in Upper Marlboro on a hill overlooking Schoolhouse Pond.

New Promotions at MVFD—and a feathery visitor

The Morningside Volunteer Fire Department announces these promotions: Andre Edwards, to Captain of the Engine Co.; Danny Rae, to Lieutenant, assigned to Station Command; Lucas Oblander, to Fire Sergeant, to Squad Command; Ram Braza, to EMS Sergeant; Lauren Gray, to EMS Sergeant, to EMS Command; and Timothy Duffy, to Sergeant, assigned to Station Command.

Also, they had a surprise visitor the other day. Members found an injured bird (there's a cute photo, looks like an owl) that had had an encounter with a cat. They scooped the bird up and alerted Animal Control, which took it to a wildlife center in DC where it will be able to heal and return to the wild!

Neighbors & other good people

Cpl. Katherine de Barros was sworn in as Upper Marlboro's first female officer on Oct. 22. She comes with a record of 26 years in law enforcement, including service with the MPD and the Prince George's County Police Department.

Darryl Kelley, a lawyer who is Deacon at St. Philip's in Camp Springs, has been awarded the John Carroll Society's 2019 Pro Bono Legal Service Award for volunteering with Catholic Charities' legal network that serves low-income people in the Washington region.

Major Zachary O'Lare is the new Commander of Prince George's Police District IV. Assistant Commander is Capt. Levi Carson.

Brewer Clark, of Clinton United Methodist Church, retired Aug. 26 after more than 30 years at the organ.

Pearl McNamara turned 75 on Nov. 2. Someone sent me this announcement, and I'd like to know more about Pearl. Email me.

Lawrence Charles "Larry" Schlueter, owner and manager of the Branchwood Liquor store in Clinton from 1966 to 1981, died Oct. 15. He was a resident at Lighthouse Senior Living in Ellicott City. His wife Nancy preceded him in death. Survivors include three sons and grandchildren.

My granddaughter, Claire Mudd, was delighted to meet Juan Soto after a Nats' game, and got his picture. Claire lives in Laurel, is a senior at the U. of Md., and loves the Nats.

Changing Landscape and other things

Pit bulls are still banned in Prince George's County. There was a proposal to lift the ban, but a vote Oct. 22 has left the ban in place.

Ja'rome Johnson and Demetri Morsell Selected CIAA Players of the Week

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (October 28, 2019)—The Week #8 CIAA Football Weekly Honor Roll was released today and Bowie State junior Ja'rome Johnson (Washington, D.C.) along with sophomore Demetri Morsell (Upper Marlboro) were selected as Quarterback and Defensive Back Players of the Week following the Bulldogs' 52-17 home win against Virginia Union on Saturday.

Johnson continued his impressive season, completing 23 of 28 passes (82 percent) for a career-high 395 yards and five touchdowns. He had seven carries for 56 yards (8.0 yards per carry) and this is his third weekly honor of the season. Morsell totaled five solo tackles and a pass breakup for the Bowie State defense. He also picked off two passes, including one that he returned 92 yards for a touchdown and currently leads the CIAA with six interceptions on the season.

Eating For Better Mental Health

There is a growing body of research showing that the dietary choices we make each day affect not only our physical bodies (yes, that beer belly didn't just happen by itself) but can also play an important role in our mental health.

Most parents have probably observed what foods high in sugar sometimes do to their children. And while studies have failed to find a definitive link between sugar and hyperactivity, most moms will tell you that their son or daughter seems more excited and active after eating a sugary snack.

The reason for that higher activity level may not be as much physiological as psychological. Eating foods we like makes us feel better and most of us are genetically programmed to like sweet-tasting foods. This goes back to our ancient ancestors who learned that when veggies and fruits were sweet tasting they were ripe and safe to eat. Feeding kids treats that are high in sugar makes them feel good and happy, and usually also often more active.

Importantly, recent studies have found links between food choices and mental health for both children and adults. One large-scale study found that following a diet high in processed and sugary foods appeared to increase the risk for depression. When participants followed a Mediterranean-style diet high in fruits, vegetables, and high fiber, low fat foods, there was a 25% to 35% reduction in the risk of depression.

Nutritionists advise paying attention to how various foods affect you specifically. If certain traditional meals leave you bloated and unhappy, you've probably made some poor dietary choices. Experts suggest making small dietary changes toward an overall diet that is now widely recognized as being healthier.

If you aren't already eating at least five servings of fruits and vegetables each day, try adding one or two servings of these healthy foods to your daily diet. It can be especially effective and even easy if you start by replacing one or two high fat or heavily processed foods. Fruits, vegetables, whole grains, nuts and legumes are just some of the foods that can leave you feeling and being physically healthier, while also contributing to good mental health.

There's no magic diet that can insure good mental health, but a healthy diet is a good start to improving physical health while also contributing to better mental and emotional health.

Counseling Corner is provided by the American Counseling Association. Comments and questions to ACACorner@counseling.org or visit the ACA website at www.counseling.org.

Chesapeake Bay Trust Adds New Voices to Its Leadership

By CINDY EDSON
Chesapeake Bay Trust

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (October 24, 2019)—The Chesapeake Bay Trust introduces four new Councilmembers, four new ex officio Trustees, and one new Governor-appointed Trustee to its organizational leadership.

The Chesapeake Bay Trust, a non-profit grant-making organization established by the Maryland General Assembly in 1985, is a unique organization in the region, providing support for hundreds of community and natural resource projects per year and over $100 million since inception. Because all communities benefit from healthy natural resources and at the same time, all communities can help improve natural resources, the Trust strives to engage all audiences of the region in natural resources programs. The grants supported by the Trust lead to actions that measurably improve local communities and increase resource stewardship through grant awards focusing on education, restoration, community engagement, science and innovation, and capacity building.

"These new voices, coming from academia, government, and private industry, are going to greatly help the Trust accomplish its mission," stated Trust board chairman, Gary Jobson of Jobson Sailing Inc, a world-class America's Cup sailor, former ESPN commentator, and NBC Olympic commentator. "These individuals are pillars of their communities, and we are thrilled to add them to the Trust family."

"Education is the most important structure in our society, and I am excited to add my expertise to the leadership of the Trust," said Dr. Rhonda Jeter, Bowie State University. "Through education, we can prepare our children today to interact responsibly with the Bay and the environment so that it will be here for them tomorrow."

"I'm honored to be asked to serve on the Advisory Council to CBT. I'm especially excited to be able to support the efforts of the CBT staff and board as they continue their Diversity, Equity, Inclusion and Justice journey," said Vernice Miller-Travis, Metropolitan Group.

The new Councilmembers [include]:
Dr. Rhonda Jeter, Dean of the College of Education, Bowie State University;

Dr. Jeter was promoted to full professor in 2012, served as department chair for eight years, and served as associate dean in the College of Education before her promotion to Dean. She provided leadership for international program and in securing program accreditations from the National Council for Accreditation of teacher Education and Council for Accreditation of Counseling & Related Educational Programs.

Vernice Miller-Travis, Executive Vice President for Environment and Sustainability, Metropolitan Group;

For more than 30 years, Vernice has been a leading proponent of environmental justice and equitable and sustainable development, at the nexus between civil rights and environmental enforcement. Of Bowie, Maryland, she was recently awarded the Robert Bullard Environmental Justice Award from the Sierra Club, which recognizes individuals who have done outstanding work in the area of environmental justice.

LARGO, Md. (October 29, 2019)—The Prince George's County Economic Development Corporation (PGCEDC) recently received a $20,000 grant from Wells Fargo to provide technical assistance and business financial planning to disadvantaged, minority-owned businesses in Prince George's County, MD. Prince George's County Executive Angela Alsobrooks applauded the award as an important tool for local businesses.

"Minority owned businesses are a vital part of our local economy," said County Executive Angela Alsobrooks. "We appreciate national partners like Wells Fargo for their support and commitment to providing local businesses with the tools they need to become financially sound and profitable. This grant, in collaboration with our Economic Development Corporation and FSC First should ultimately provide local, minority owned businesses with the access to capital most small businesses are in need of to grow and to thrive."

On December 10, 2019, the PGCEDC will launch Pathways to Financial Management for Businesses, a new initiative that will provide traditionally underserved, minority-owned businesses the technical assistance they need to successfully manage their business finances. Through this initiative, the PGCEDC and its lending partner FSC First, will hold a series of six seminars on topics from 'Financial Planning' to 'How to Approach Lenders for Financing'. The Kick-off event in December will introduce participants to the program and will include a panel of bankers and finance experts. The series will conclude with a match-making event where the program graduates will meet one-on-one with lenders and apply for financing on-site.

"We support investment in minority-owned businesses and see it as a critical part of what we do here at the Economic Development Corporation," said David Iannucci, President & CEO of the PGCEDC. "Today's small and minority-owned businesses face many challenges to loan approval and accessing capital, which often leads to an inability to manufacture products, increase employment, and scale their business. We hope to address these and many others through this pilot program."

According to the Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA) minority-owned small business loan applications are approved at a lower rate than non-minority businesses and when approved for a loan, they typically receive more than 50% less than non-minority ones and at higher rates. PGCEDC's new initiative seeks to improve these odds by ensuring that participants who complete the series are sufficiently prepared to submit a loan application and have an overall understanding about successful business finance practices.

"We are pleased to collaborate with the PGCEDC to further empower our local business owners and improve their access to capital," said Shelly Gross-Wade, President & CEO of the FSC First.

Statement by President Donnell Williams On Increase of 3rd Quarter 2019 Black Homeownership Rate

By ANTOINE THOMPSON
NAREB

WASHINGTON, DC (October 29, 2019)—The National Association of Real Estate Brokers (NAREB) is cautiously encouraged about the U.S. Census Bureau's third quarter 2019 Black homeownership rate of 42.7% up from 40.6% in the previous quarter. While all of the homeownership rates increased during this latest reporting period, the Black homeownership increase of 2.1% represented the largest uptick. In the bigger picture, NAREB is mindful that Black homeownership currently and continues to lag more than 30 percentage points behind the non-Hispanic White homeownership rate of 73.4%, higher than the recorded gap at the time of the passage of the 1968 Fair Housing Act.

Robust seasonal home purchase activity during the summer months generally accounts for the overall increases in all ethnic and general market categories. I am hopeful, however, that NAREB's boots-on-the-ground approach and other homeownership advocates will continue to support an upward trend of Black homeownership rates into the fourth quarter 2019 and beyond.

We know and take into consideration the volatility of the real estate marketplace and the prevailing purchasing distrust that runs alongside economic vagaries particularly in the Black community. Nevertheless, I remain confident that concerted efforts to educate and inform Black homebuyers about the wealth building aspects of homeownership versus uncertain and rising rental rates, will prevail.

The National Association of Real Estate Brokers (NAREB) was formed in 1947 to secure the right to equal housing opportunities regardless of race, creed or color. NAREB has advocated for legislation and supported or instigated legal challenges that ensure fair housing, sustainable homeownership, and access to credit for Black Americans. At the same time, NAREB advocates for and promotes access to business opportunity for Black real estate professionals in all of the real estate disciplines. NAREB annually publishes The State of Housing in Black America report. www.nareb.com

The workshop will provide information on the following:

- Eligibility requirements • Benefits of the program
- Application process • After approval, business development assistance available
- Overview on how set-aside contracts are awarded

COMMENTARY

Marc Morial

President and CEO, National Urban League

To Be Equal:

The Loss of Legends Cummings and Conyers Highlights the Importance of Congressional Black Caucus

"The three of us—Stokes, Chisholm and I—came to Washington determined to seize the moment, to fight for justice, to raise issues too long ignored and too little debated. We were described by the media as militant, aggressive new leaders determined to make changes in the way black members of Congress had been viewed in the past."

—U.S. Rep. William Lacy Clay, Sr., Co-Founder of the Congressional Black Caucus

In recent days America lost two influential African Americans who served as high-ranking members of the Congressional Black Caucus, John Conyers and Elijah Cummings. Their loss has served to reaffirm the importance of the CBC and the election of dedicated public servants. John Conyers, who represented the Detroit area in Congress for more than 50 years, was one of the founding members of the CBC. Conyers was part of a wave of civil rights activists who arrived in Congress in the 1960s, determined to change the status quo. In 1968, Rep. Charles Diggs of Michigan convened an informal group called the Democracy Select Committee.

"The sooner we get organized for group action, the more effective we can become," Diggs said.

By 1971, the number of Black members of Congress had risen from nine to 13, and the Committee members decided to formalize their organization, and the Congressional Black Caucus was formed.

The group immediately butted heads with then-President Richard Nixon, who refused to meet with the members. They interpreted his refusal as a broader rejection of the interests of all Black Americans, and responded by boycotting Nixon's State of the Union Address. "We now refuse to be part of your audience," Rep. William Lacy Clay, Sr., wrote in a letter to the President.

The CBC was responsible for the anti-apartheid Free South Africa Movement that brought worldwide attention to the human rights abuses of the racist South African state. The longest civil disobedience movement in U.S. history, it led to the enactment of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986, which imposed sanctions against South Africa and set preconditions for lifting the sanctions that would apartheid. President Ronald Reagan's veto of the legislation was overridden, the first foreign policy veto override in the 20th Century.

The National Urban League has maintained a long and productive partnership with the CBC since its inception. As noted in the official House of Representatives history:

The legislative agendas of African-American Members in the post-1970 era reflected the diversity of their committee assignments and the range of interests within the general membership of Congress. Most sought to advance a broad progressive legislative agenda supported by advocacy groups such as the National Urban League and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP)—extending voting rights protections, improving educational and economic opportunities, fostering urban renewal, and providing access to better health care.

While the CBC has enjoyed much closer and better relationships with Presidents since landing on Nixon's infamous "Enemies List" in the 1970s, the group has clashed with the current occupant of the Oval Office.

A few months after his inauguration, members delivered a 130-page rebuke of his policies on criminal justice, voting rights, education, health care and other issues.

Many CBC members boycotted President Trump's 2018 State of the Union Address following his disparaging comments about African and Caribbean nations. Those who attended wore kente cloth to show solidarity with Africa.

Today, CBC membership stands at 54 after the loss of Elijah Cummings, the largest number in history. Four of the House of Representatives' Standing Committees are chaired by CBC member: Bobby Scott, Education and Labor; Maxine Waters, Financial Services; Bennie Thompson, Homeland Security; and Eddie Bernice Johnson, Science, Space and Technology. CBC Member Jim Clyburn holds the position of House Majority Whip, the number-two-ranking office in the chamber.

As the current administration continues working to dismantle civil rights protections and deny the vote to people of color, the work of the CBC is more important than ever. In honor of the legacy of Elijah Cummings and John Conyers, we must continue to support the CBC's mission and recognize its leadership.

President Emerita, Children's Defense Fund

ChildWatch:

Acting to End Child Poverty

"We've had 20 years of presidential debates, and we have never talked about the violence in America of child poverty. We have got to begin to talk more eloquently and persuasively and urgently about doing the things not just to make sure fair taxes are paid by people on the top, but that we deal with the moral obscenity of having the highest levels of child poverty in the industrial world."

—Senator Cory Booker, October 15 Democratic presidential debate

The Children's Defense Fund has been standing with 18-year-old Beat the Odds® scholar Israel Glenn in calling for a presidential debate question about child poverty. It's been 20 years since presidential candidates have been asked in a debate how they would solve this urgent crisis. Israel started an online petition demanding this question be asked because he doesn't want another generation of children to experience the burdens of hunger, homelessness, and instability he did. More than 30,000 people and five presidential candidates have joined him and during the last presidential debate Senator Cory Booker spoke up to agree. The fact that the United States has one of the highest child poverty rates in the industrialized world is a moral obscenity and profound threat to America's future. It's time to ask all those running for president and public office at every level what steps they will take to end it.

Senator Booker's plan for "Ending Child Poverty in America and Creating Opportunity for All" would expand the Child Tax Credit; create a "child allowance" for families with children; strengthen the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP, formerly known as food stamps); provide universal free school lunch to help eliminate child hunger; reform Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) to help more children and families escape poverty; and tackle child and family homelessness. It also would ensure jobs pay enough to keep families out of poverty and expand affordable child care for working families.

Senator Booker says: "Eliminating poverty isn't just a moral calling; we all lose when not everyone can participate in our economic growth. Our children will be the leaders of the future, and the workforce powering the global economy. A recent report by the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine found that child poverty costs us as much $1 trillion each year—or 5.4 percent of GDP—driven by higher crime rates, worse health outcomes, and lower earnings among poor kids after becoming adults. Every dollar spent today combating child poverty saves us $7 down the road."

Senator Booker isn't the only candidate seeking to solve this moral and economic crisis. Senator Kamala Harris' "Children's Agenda" would issue an Executive Order to End Child Poverty and establish a Federal Interagency Working Group to coordinate federal action as part of a plan to cut child poverty 50 percent in her first term. She too would protect and strengthen existing safety net programs, provide middle class and working families a tax credit to address the rising cost of living, and fight to close the pay gap to cut poverty for children with working mothers. Several other candidates have plans to tackle pieces of the child poverty crisis by raising the minimum wage, making child care more affordable, and more. Many of their proposals are similar to those outlined in CDF's Ending Child Poverty Now report. We are waiting to hear every presidential candidate's plan for ending child poverty.

After the last debate, New York Times columnist Nicholas Kristof cheered Senator Booker's mention of child poverty onstage, saying, "Those kids can't vote, so they need us to vote on their behalf. Bravo!" We must continue speaking up for children in this election and putting the issues that impact them front and center. Let's all keep talking about child poverty and demanding urgent action because children only have one childhood and it is right now.

At Symposium, Van Hollen Calls Efforts to Ignore Climate Change "All Nonsense"

By NORA ECKERT
Capital News Service

COLUMBIA, Md. (October 30, 2019)—Maryland Sen. Chris Van Hollen on Wednesday stressed the urgency of understanding climate change and dismissed Trump administration efforts to ban the term as "all nonsense."

The Democrat, a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, told the University Space Research Association's inaugural Earth From Space Institute symposium that climate change should be a regular part of the federal government's conversations, especially regarding the budget.

The two-day symposium, titled "Making Communities More Resilient to Extreme Flooding," brought together scientists from around the world to brainstorm ways to salvage areas that are hardest hit by flooding and to prevent future damage.

"On Capitol Hill, they say we have a lot of commotion but not necessarily a lot of forward motion," Van Hollen said. "But here you're working on very important efforts and projects for the United States and other parts of the world."

Van Hollen expressed his frustration with how some of his colleagues in Congress discuss climate change—or rather, ignore it—citing reports that some federal departments had banned using the term.

"This is all nonsense. We have to protect the integrity of the scientific enterprise," he said emphatically.

"There are a lot of people in Congress who totally have your back," the senator said. "We will be the first to call out any efforts to penalize scientists."

Van Hollen said he's worked to do just that, bringing lawmakers' attention to space-based, national and local methods to combat climate change.

Many in attendance said the senator is a strong ally of the scientific community. USRA President and CEO Jeffrey Isaacson called him someone who "fights to protect scientific integrity in government," and "a champion of science." "We have a leader in Washington who actually knows NASA acronyms," exclaimed Miguel Roman, the founding director of URSA and the symposium.

Van Hollen has been an outspoken advocate for NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland, and noted its importance in informing natural disaster response efforts.

"With a changing climate we can expect more disasters, more extreme weather, and we'll need to use this data more and more from our satellites and space-based instruments to address challenges in our communities," the senator said.

Van Hollen also highlighted the cleanup of the Chesapeake Bay and rebuilding towns after flooding, such as Ellicott City, which has been hammered with two catastrophic floods in the last four years.

Officials and residents have debated the utility of rebuilding the downtown and Van Hollen said decisions must encompass sustainable infrastructure and "resilient" rebuilding.

"It only makes sense from a taxpayer point of view...that you're building it to last," he said.

In Maryland, Van Hollen said the disappearing islands in the Chesapeake and the danger to cities on the Bay is in the front of his mind while developing the budget.

He said he fought back against proposed cuts on several programs, such as the carbon monitoring program, that work to combat climate change and its effects. These programs will continue to receive funding in the next budget and some will even receive more funds than the previous budget, he said.

Van Hollen said he hopes the United States rejoins the Paris Climate Accord, which subsequent speakers pointed out Howard County joined earlier this year, making it one of the only counties in the nation to do so.

Prince George's County Department of Social Services Kicks Off Health Insurance 2020 Open Enrollment

By RYAN PINKNEY
PG County Department of Social Services

DISTRICT HEIGHTS, Md. (November 1, 2019)—Prince George's County is gearing up for year seven of open enrollment for health insurance under the Affordable Care Act (ACA) that begins Nov. 1 and continues through Dec. 15, 2019. This year, there is only a 45-day turn-around for residents to enroll. Prince George's County wants to make sure that everyone who is eligible gets covered. Uninsured and under-insured residents 18 to 64 years of age may be eligible.

While the uninsured rate in Prince George's County has declined over the past six years, there are approximately 45,000 people who are eligible for insurance, but remain uninsured. Open enrollment is the primary means for individuals to enroll in health insurance.

"Just having health care isn't enough. Having a card isn't enough; it is also access to services," says County Executive Angela Alsobrooks. "Having health insurance is critical to achieving optimal health. Not having health insurance creates daunting challenges for individuals and families that can last many years. Our goal is to encourage residents to get covered now."

The Maryland Health Connection (MHC), the state's official health insurance marketplace, provides private plans for health and dental insurance. Residents can benefit by getting tax credits or discounts. Nine out of ten Maryland residents, who enroll, qualify for lower costs. Residents, who qualify for Medicaid, are able to enroll year-round for health plans.

The Department of Social Services (DSS) serves as the lead agency in Prince George's County to provide outreach, education and enrollment services to residents. "We want to be able to reach people throughout the community," says DSS Director Gloria Brown Burnett. "In Prince George's County, we are united in providing the critical connection services. To do this, we've had to create a County network, which continues to be beneficial in reducing the uninsured rate in Prince George's County."

Through its Prince George's County Health Connect Program, a consumer assistance organization under MHC, a network has been created. Its partnership includes the local DSS sites; the Health Department, and community based-non-profits, which together provide an access network designed to break down some of the barriers that inhibit enrollment.

Bi-lingual, in-person assistance is available at all of the Department of Social Services (DSS) sites in Hyattsville, Temple Hills and Landover; as well as two storefront locations, at La Union Mall in Langley Park, and the newest site at the Penn Station Shopping Center in District Heights. Each year, 380 million tons of plastic is created worldwide, and as the plastics market continues to increase, many analysts predict production could quadruple by 2050. More than 75% of plastic materials are discarded after one use. Many of them end up in our oceans and waterways, harming wildlife and spreading toxins.

The Green Craft Fair not only has upcycled items for sale including jewelry, candles, wood carvings, paintings, and more, but fair-goers can learn about ways to get involved in the community and create recycled crafts with members of local non-profit and environmental groups.

The event will feature food vendors, face painting, a kids craft table, and more! While you're there, you can also purchase a raffle ticket and win one of several items donated by our vendors, if you're feeling lucky! Or donate unwanted books at the Book Exchange Booth.

The Department of Parks and Recreation delivers an award-winning park system through progressive, innovative leadership and a commitment to the community and the environment in Prince George's County. For more on the Department of Parks and Recreation, visit www.pgpr.com and stay connected on Facebook, Twitter, Flickr, YouTube, and Instagram. ANNAPOLIS, Md. (October 30, 2019)—Harriet, the first full-length movie about Maryland's most famous conductor on the Underground Railroad, w[as] released on November 1, 2019 by Focus Features. Moviegoers can see Harriet in major cities such as New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, as well as many locations across Maryland, including Cambridge—the birthplace of Harriet Tubman—at Cambridge Premier Cinemas. The movie opens nationwide on November 15.

"The life and legacy of Harriet Tubman is well-known by Marylanders, and we are excited to know that her story of heroism, courage, and sacrifice will be shared with others," said Governor Larry Hogan. "I encourage all citizens to visit the Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad Scenic Byway, the Harriet Tubman Museum and Education Center, and other sites in Dorchester County to see where her story began."

"We are excited that Harriet Tubman's story has been brought to the big screen," said Maryland Commerce Secretary Kelly M. Schulz. "Through this film, people all over our country and the world will get to see the important role that Maryland played in her life and in her efforts to lead many brave men, women, and children to freedom."

"I was thrilled to learn the details of this major feature film about Harriet Tubman, and anticipate that movie-goers will be inspired to learn more about the woman called the 'Moses of Her People.' Visitors are flocking to see the places that shaped her life that are on the Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad Byway," said Liz Fitzsimmons, managing director of Maryland's Division of Tourism & Film. "As they traverse the same fields, forests, and marshes that Tubman did, visitors truly understand why Maryland is considered The Most Powerful Underground Railroad Storytelling Destination in the World."

The movie has received critical acclaim following its premiere at the Toronto International Film Festival in September. The film's director Kasi Lemmons thanked Maryland, the citizens of the Eastern Shore, the descendants of Tubman, and the Harriet Tubman Organization.

"People should be thrilled to know that there is a Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad State Park and a Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad Scenic Byway so that filmgoers who want to learn more about this amazing woman can come to Maryland to witness where her story began," said Lemmons.

To assist visitors in identifying the authentic Underground Railroad sites in Maryland, the following materials are available:

Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad Byway Driving Tour Guide: In 1849, Tubman traveled by night and hid by day as she self-liberated, making her way from Maryland through Delaware and into Philadelphia. This comprehensive guide (available in print and as an audio guide) directs travelers through landscapes that appear much as it did to Tubman and her family.

Maryland's Underground Railroad Network to Freedom Guide: Maryland is the state with the most documented successful escapes on the Underground Railroad—reflected in a robust collection of 81 sites in the National Park Service National Underground Railroad Network to Freedom Program.

Network to Freedom Film: Maryland's Underground Railroad history includes famous leaders in addition to Harriet Tubman. This new nine-minute film is available for viewing at any of the state Welcome Centers and streams online at www.visitmaryland.org/network-to-freedom.

Maryland African-American Heritage Travel Guide: Inside the guide, readers will discover the compelling stories of entrepreneurs, lawyers, judges, doctors, writers, teachers, clergy, performers, and sports figures. Programs, walking tours, cruises, audio guides, and annual festivals are also conveniently listed.

The travel guides will be widely distributed at state Welcome Centers, local visitor centers, and select museums and attractions. They may be viewed online at www.visitmaryland.org/brochure or a free guide can be mailed by calling 1-800-719-5900.
