Medical Debt from A3

A 2020 Gonzales poll by Economic Action Maryland showed that 34% of Marylanders would not be able to pay an unexpected $500 medical bill.

Medical debt also disproportionately affects Black people. In Maryland, 24% of Black residents said they delayed seeking medical care because of costs compared to 12% of white people.

"Unlike a lot of other debts, no one chooses to get sick," said Marceline White, director of Economic Action Maryland, an organization that has helped pass legislation targeting unfair medical debt practices.

"You can't cost-comparison shop when you're in an ambulance on the way to a hospital," she said. "So many families simply don't have the resources to absorb that kind of unexpected financial blow, which can be catastrophic."

White said the new bill by Van Hollen and Murphy is a positive step for the country and targets the "most egregious" medical debt practices.

She stressed the importance of reform with the backdrop of the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and said there has been broad support in Maryland for this type of legislation.

"I think we are going to see continued strains on our health care system, and on many families who are having chronic illnesses sort of post-pandemic post-COVID," White said. "I think this should be something that most Americans and most members of Congress can agree upon. At least I would certainly hope so."

RIP Medical Debt is a charity established to reduce the burden of medical debt on low-income families using donations, paying off over $7 billion of debt since 2014 for over 4 million people. CEO and president of RIP Medical Debt, Allison Sesso, is enthusiastic about federal attention to the topic.

"We must do more to protect patients from medical debt and ensure people get the health care they need without fear of incurring debt," Sesso said in a statement to Capital News Service. "(The bill) takes positive steps toward addressing the data challenges we face in understanding the prevalence of medical debt so we can better target policy solutions and more closely monitor the use of extraordinary collection actions."

YEAR REVIEW OF ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION BEAVER DAM ROAD LANDFILL BELTSVILLE AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH CENTER BELTSVILLE, MD 20705

The Beltsville (MD) Agricultural Research Center (BARC), a part of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service, is beginning a five-year review of its environmental restoration of the Beaver Dam Road Land Fill (BDRLF). This location is about a 14-acre area of concern that is part of BARC' National Priorities Listing (Superfund) by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

From the early 1940s through the 1980s, the BDRLF was used for disposal of nonhazardous materials such as rubble from masonry construction debris, tree clippings, wood, and broken asphalt from BARC operations. A Remedial Investigation also identified a plume of groundwater contaminated with trichloroethylene (TCE) up to a maximum concentration of 1,100 parts per billion (ppb). The plume impacts an area of about two-thirds of an acre to the southeast of the BDRLF. The Safe Drinking Water Act calls for a maximum contaminant level for TCE of 5 ppb, which is the cleanup goal for the site, although there are no drinking water wells in the area. To meet this goal, a remedy that included installation of a passive groundwater treatment system with a permeable reactive barrier (PRB) or "biowall" that captures and remediates TCE was selected and implemented. The biowall is currently in place and is undergoing performance monitoring.

The first five-year review was conducted in 2018. The site remedy was expanded in 2020 to include the installation of upgradient trench pits and microbial injections. The second five-year review will include an examination of the BDRLF's Record of Decision, a review of site conditions, the implementation of remedy enhancements to improve system performance and a review of the effectiveness of the biowall. It is being conducted between January 1, 2023, and January 31, 2023.

All published data on the BDRLF and other BARC NPL/Superfund areas of concern are available for inspection at:
